

█ "Back in 2025, Google made moving your photos to a Mac a pain in the butt. You have to do it manually, and it strips your photos of information like where and when they were taken. We're here to help, and it's as easy as four clicks (and a bit of wait time)!

█ "Your browser's on Google Takeout now. It looks like a tax return — ignore it all. Look up! Look way up! On the top of the menu, hit "Deselect all."

█ "Now tick exactly one box: Google Photos. Scroll right past the other forty things Google's trying to hand you."

█ "Choose which albums you'd like to move over, hit Export, choose ".zip" when asked. Google emails you when it's cooked — could be as quick as popping a timbit, or could be as long as a nap, all depending on the size of the album(s) and your computer's speed."

█ "That's it! Go live your life! I'll shout when it's ready."

█ — later — chime  "Your takeout has been reheated. Album transfer complete, geoData and photoTakenTime intact. Have a nice day :)"
